Laurentian Bank to close New Carlisle, Port Daniel and Murdochville branches

NEW CARLISLE – In an attempt to cut its operating costs, the management of Laurentian Bank has opted for the closure of 50 branches in Quebec, including three branches on the Gaspé Peninsula; New Carlisle, Port Daniel and Murdochville. The closures will be effective in June 2017.

The bank’s spokesperson, Hélène Soulard, explains the decision with the intention to “adapt to the needs stemming from changing habits. People are not using our branches as much as before. They prefer other means,” she says, referring to online services.

The move will lead to the elimination of 300 jobs in Quebec, which represents 8% of the bank’s workforce.

Ms. Soulard points out that most positions will be cut through “natural attrition. There is a freeze on hiring and eight positions could be maintained. We might transfer some employees to those positions determined by the collective agreements.”

On the Gaspé Peninsula, eight people work in the three branches that will be closed.

Ms. Soulard prefers talking about “branch amalgamations” rather than closures and indicates that some of the eight positions could be moved to the branches that will remain open.

“The Paspebiac and New Richmond branches will remain open. We might transfer some employees to those service points. We are assessing the situation,” says Ms. Soulard.

What about the people who rely solely on going to their current Laurentian Bank branch, especially seniors? Will the bank keep a small office to meet with those customers?

“We are just beginning the process. The amalgamations will only take place in June 2017. We want to make sure that we have ample support for our clients. We are looking at the alternatives,” points out Hélène Soulard.

Were the three branches all losing money? “Not necessarily; we take into account various criteria when we assess a situation. Everything is taken into account, the productivity, pinch hit solutions, the fact that the types of banking service usages are increasingly fragmented,” emphasizes Ms. Soulard.

The Laurentian Bank has not yet decided what will happen to its New Carlisle, Port Daniel and Murdochville buildings. “It is too early to decide,” says Hélène Soulard.

New Carlisle doesn’t have another bank. Paspebiac, the closest neighbouring town, has three banks; Laurentian Bank, National Bank and Caisses Desjardins.

Laurentian Bank is the only bank in Port Daniel but there is a Caisses Desjardins branch in Gascons, so within the municipal limits of Port Daniel-Gascons.

Caisses Desjardins has a service point in Murdochville but no automated teller.

Three chiefs representing 13 communities opposed to hydrocarbon development

GASPÉ: – Three chiefs representing 13 Native communities from the North Shore, the Gaspé Peninsula and Lower St. Lawrence are taking a common position against the development of hydrocarbons, whether that development means hydraulic fracturing on Anticosti Island or in the town of Gaspé, offshore drillings in the Gulf of St. Lawrence or the construction of a pipeline passing near Rivière-du-Loup towards New Brunswick.

These three chiefs, Manon Jeannotte, of the Mi’gmaq community of Gespeg, Jean-Charles Piétacho, an Innu from Ekuanitshit, on the North Shore, and Jacques Tremblay, a Malecite from Viger, in the Lower St. Lawrence, are talking about getting physically involved in blocking companies’ attempts to explore for oil and gas.

Chief Jeannotte invites Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and Quebec Premier Philippe Couillard “to come and have a glass of water in Gaspé, to come and have a glass of water in Gespeg.” Both men would then have “an idea of the threat that these hydrocarbon exploration projects represent for the region’s sources of water.”

Chief Jean-Charles Piétacho, who is also representing eight additional Innu communities from the North Shore in this case, clearly indicates that the Natives will use all means at their disposal, political, legal and physical to counter most exploration attempts that could be undertaken by oil and gas companies in the three regions.

“We will use all possible means; politically, (we will proceed) through correspondence, while legally, we have filed four injunctions, including an interlocutory one that will be heard in Quebec City in December 2016. In addition to that, we have our leaders mobilized,” indicates Chief Piétacho.

The three chiefs expressed their stand on October 7 in Gaspé in the presence of other members of their communities. Cathy Martin, chief counsellor of Listuguj also attended the presentation.

Outraged that neither the Quebec nor Canadian governments have consulted the Natives about the budding oil initiatives, Chief Piétacho was more incisive than Manon Jeannotte when referring to Premier Couillard:

“Couillard, it is over, it is over for exploration on Anticosti Island (…). I will stand in front of the drilling rig.” When he presented his viewpoint, chief Piétacho was on his way back from North Dakota, where he gave his support to the Sioux-Lakota, who are trying to block the passage of a pipeline. He thinks that the Sioux-Lakota might come to Anticosti Island...
Gaspésie Railway Society gets largest transport contract in its history

Blades to be loaded in New Richmond but transporter targets Gaspé

NEW RICHMOND – The Gaspésie Railway Society has just signed the largest annual transport contract of its history.

The company will haul 600 windmill blades between New Richmond and Matapedia. The blades are made by LM Wind Power in Gaspé and will ultimately be delivered in the United States.

The contract was awarded to the Gaspésie Railway Society by Canadian National, which will haul the blades from Matapedia and supervise their final destination, in the central part of the United States. Other American railways will be involved in the process.

The contract stems directly from the agreement announced on October 11 the acquisition of LM Wind Power and its 13 plants worldwide.

The president of the Gaspésie Railway Society, Éric Dubé, will not divulge the value of the contract awarded by CN, as he wants to keep a competitive edge regarding other transporters and means of transportation.

“I can only say that for the moment, this agreement is worth more money than all our other current contracts combined,” he concludes.

Nine-hundred cars will be required to haul the 600 blades. The components measure 42 metres in length, with the flatcars only being 29 metres. A single blade therefore needs some space on a second car. According to the arrangement set up by CN, two blades will need three cars to be hauled.

The blades will leave in unit trains of 72 cars. Each train will carry 48 blades.

“Canadian National wants to ship these trains straight to their United States destination without integrating them with other trains. The trains leaving New Richmond will be delivered ‘untouched’ down there,” explains Éric Dubé.

The blades will be trucked from Gaspé to New Richmond even though the Gaspesian Railway goes as far as Gaspé.

The situation stems from the fact that Quebec’s department of Transport has not invested any money in infrastructure on the Gaspé Peninsula line since 2014.

The new contract prompts Éric Dubé and his team to try and convince Quebec’s department of Transport to upgrade the rail line between Caplan and Gaspé. “We have other hauling requests from clients located along the dormant section.”

The Gaspésie Railway Society attempted to haul a 37-metre blade in 2012 but the system used then will not be used this time around.

LLB Foundation 2016 Walkathon

The walkathon that was held on Sunday, October 2 in New Carlisle raised $4,294.40. Approximately 38 participants took part in the 9km walk from the Chalet to the Gazebo at Black Lake. Sunny and warm temperatures made the walk enjoyable for all. Many participants stayed to enjoy a light lunch after the walk.

We would like to thank the volunteers who helped make this possible, the participants, the many contributors who opened their wallets to make this fundraiser successful and the Municipality of New Carlisle.

Millions for Research and Development

Thierry Haroun

GASPÉ - Minister of National Revenue, Diane Lebouthillier, designated more than $4 million in support for two projects at Cégep de la Gaspésie et des Îles. One project, ($3.6 million), in partnership with Mérinov, located in Grand River, will involve the establishment of a consulting service centre to help small and medium sized lobster processors increase their productivity and competitiveness through modernized infrastructure and training. “By investing in R&D in the lobster sector, we consolidate jobs in terms of research. And more money, also means spinoffs in the workplace, in local businesses, and so forth. It’s a chain that is profitable to all. Our government believes in applied research and our Cégep has all the expertise to do so,” Minister Lebouthillier told Spec at the news conference. The majority of the funding is provided by the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council of Canada’s College and Community Innovation Program, with additional funding from the Canada Foundation for Innovation’s Industry Innovation Fund.

The Family Organizer has distributed more than 2100 copies in the MRC de Côte-de-Gaspé. And this document will interest many. Spec looked into it for our readers.

The Family Organizer, distributed by the Regroupement Santé Jeunesse Côte-de-Gaspé in schools (such as Belle Anse and Gaspé Elementary School), Centre de la petite enfance, private kindergartens, librarries, Maison des jeunes, Maison de la famille, municipalities and community organizations, is a directory of resources and services for families of the MRC Côte-de-Gaspé.

You can find a large array of information, such as emergency phone numbers, help searching resources, new immigrants services, Anglophone organizations (Perce-Gaspé Vision Now is a partner), a women’s section and a list of activities for the entire family through a calendar where the monthly activities are displayed.

SPEE read the document and found that important sections are translated into English. Moreover, some of them have tips such as the following: “To help your child learn new words, it is recommended to read a short story with simple vocabulary, which allows you to read the actual words in the story. If you find your child losing interest in the story, try to animate the story by making gestures or sounds and finish the end of the story in your own words if necessary.”

About food, here’s a tip: “Prepare meals with your child! Kids love to cook!”

In addition to teaching them about food preparation, it will also help to develop their autonomy and their self-esteem! Soon they will be able to do it themselves ... with pride!” You can also learn this when reading the Family Organizer.

“Prepare meals with your child! Kids love to cook!” and finish the end of the story in your own words if necessary.”

When your child shows a good behavior and you want them to continue this behavior, you have to validate it by naming the behavior and placing value on it. It is 8 to 10 times more effective to praise the good behavior than it is to argue over a behavior that you don’t want. If you want good behavior from your child, remember to praise them when they do it!”

Julie Parizeau, who works for the Regroupement, mentions that this document “is very helpful in many ways. First, it gathers all the information that a family needs. It gives tips on good habits to start in terms of physical activities and nutrition. It’s our first edition and the ones to come will be enhanced with other information that we will have gathered over time. The monthly activities available in the MRC are updated on our web site,” she pointed out.

On December 1, 2015, at the Percé courthouse, Denis Garriott, 53, from Gaspé, appeared by designated attorney without being present before Quebec Court Judge Jules Berthelot, on a charge of sexual assault on Ruth Francœur, allegedly committed between September 1 and December 1, 2015.

Judge Berthelot set the case to November 14 for the orientation of the case and the declaration of the accused. He is represented by attorney Enrico Théberge.

The victim in that case has since passed away.

On October 13, 10 Sûreté du Québec officers, including two investigators raided a cannabis grow-op on an Anse-à-Beaufils residential property. The police seized 125 cannabis plants behind the house, 40 lbs of cannabis leaves and 30 lbs of cannabis buds in the house and grow-op paraphernalia.

The same day Serge Doré, 63, from Percé, was arrested on site and appeared before Quebec Court Judge Jules Berthelot at the Percé courthouse on charges of production of cannabis and possession of cannabis for the purpose of trafficking.

Following a ball hearing of October 14, Judge Berthelot released the accused, set bail at $3,000 with deposit and prohibited him to possess offensive and restrictive weapons, consume alcohol and to possess and consume drugs. The accused must return to court on November 14. He is represented by attorney Yves Desbiens from Chandler.

“The investigation was triggered by information received recently from the public. The operation was carried out by members of the major crime squad, based in Pabos, assisted by police officers of the Percé Rock MRC Sûreté du Québec detachment,” explained SQ spokesperson Sgt. Claude Doiron, four hours after the October 13 drug bust.

The Sûreté du Québec issued over 5,000 infraction tickets province-wide during the Thanksgiving weekend. Most of the tickets dealt with speeding; failure to fasten seatbelts and the use of cellular phones while driving. In addition, the police arrested 90 drivers for impaired driving.

MINOR EXEMPTION FROM URBANISM BY-LAWS

NOTICE is hereby given that the Town Council, at a regular meeting that will be held on Monday, November 7, 2016, at 8 pm, will consider the request for minor exemption from the zoning By-Law 1156-11, presented by Mr. Jean-Claude Cassivi for a property situated at 2, rue du Chantier-Maritime.

The nature and consequences of this exemption are the following:

- the nature of the minor exemption is to reduce by 6.09 meters the minimal front back margin of 10 meters provided at the specifications grid of the IC-297 area required by the zoning By-Law 1156-11;
- the minor exemption will have for consequence to permit the enlargement of the principal building with the front setback at 3.91 meters.

During this meeting, the Town Council will hear the interested wishing to be heard on that request.

Given at Gaspé, October 9, 2016.

Isabelle Vázina,
Director of legal services and town clerk.
The surprise victory of Jean-François Lisée at the helm of the Parti Québécois considerably changes the reality expected by Liberal Party Premier Philippe Couillard and Coalition Avenir Québec’s leader François Legault, who were initially predicting a win by Alexandre Cloutier.

Jean-François Lisée is a far tougher debater than Alexandre Cloutier at the National Assembly. Premier Couillard will have his hands full with the interrogations and intellectual remarks of Mr. Lisée during their question period exchanges.

The Parti Québécois leader has a better grasp of many complicated issues and a much deeper political culture than Mr. Couillard. However, if he doesn’t correct his arrogance and pretentious demeanor, Mr. Lisée’s interventions will fall flat. The Liberals are also counting on the fact that Jean-François Lisée can be spectacular when he is good, and just as spectacular when he is bad.

The Liberals are counting on the possibility that Mr. Lisée’s interventions will fall flat. The secular charter position on the secular charter.

As for Québec solidaire, there is no hurry as well. There is a lot of ground work to do before coming up with a sturdier team. One of the party’s three elected Members of the National Assembly, Françoise David, needs to be replaced, as she isn’t enter the 2016 race, knowing without admitting that Alexandre Cloutier would be very hard to beat.

He decided to take on the battle and ate away at Mr. Cloutier’s initial victory margin through good tactical moves. He brought the secular charter scarecrow out of the closet, a trick that worked to a certain extent with a number of PQ partisans, the old guard. It was an opportunistic move in those circumstances but it could fail during an electoral campaign, where political party candidates have to convince non-members to vote for them.

Most Liberal party advisers had a greater fear of Alexandre Cloutier for two reasons, his young image, something Philippe Couillard cannot personify, and his very moderate position on the secular charter.

Being a loose cannon on a regular basis, Jean-François Lisée can be spectacular when he is good, and just as spectacular when he is bad. The Liberals are counting on the possibility that he will be spectacularly bad more often than good.

The Parti Québécois leadership race Jean-François Lisée has proved once again that he is a master tactician. He forfeited in 2014, when it became evident that Pierre-Karl Péladeau would win a landslide and almost didn’t enter the 2016 race, knowing without admitting that Alexandre Cloutier would be very hard to beat.

The Liberals are totally aware that 56% of the electorate are currently expressing dissatisfaction at the performance of Philippe Couillard’s government, but a party only needs 40% of the electorate’s support to win a majority, considering that three parties are potential contenders.

Underrating Jean-François Lisée could be a huge mistake for the Liberals though, especially if they are caught again with ethical problems. If he can control his pretension, Mr. Lisée will use deadly one-liners that might send Philippe Couillard and his team reeling for a while.

Coalition Avenir Québec’s leader François Legault knows that he will be almost invisible for a while, given the battle already raging between Philippe Couillard and Jean-François Lisée. He needs some time anyway to find a suitable team in time for the 2018 electoral campaign and a suitable program that will make him win seats elsewhere than in the suburbs. He might as well benefit from people’s potential saturation of seeing the premier and the opposition leader fight mercilessly.

As for Québec solidaire, there is no hurry as well. There is a lot of ground work to do before coming up with a sturdier team. One of the party’s three elected Members of the National Assembly, Francoise David, needs to be replaced, as she will not run for another term. Besides, time might play well for Québec solidaire if Jean-François Lisée thinks that he will eventually need some kind of alliance with Quebec’s fourth party to win enough seats and kick the Liberal Party out.
Possible sighting of eastern cougar in Black Cape

Gilles Gagné

NEW RICHMOND – A rare sighting of a cougar possibly occurred on October 7 in the Black Cape sector of New Richmond. A resident of that sector, Marie-France Émond, is hesitant to name the species she saw but she knows that “it is not a cat.”

There have been several cougar observations made by people on the Gaspé Peninsula over the last 15 years but photographic or video evidence is very rare and in most cases not very clear.

Around 4 p.m. on October 7, Marie-France Émond was washing dishes with her mother-in-law when she heard her shout: “My God, there is really a big cat there!”

Marie-France Émond quickly replied: “It is not a cat. I don’t know what it is, but it is not a cat. We have five of them and they are not that big.”

She fetched her cellular phone in order to take a picture. “It took some time before being able to take a shot. We can’t see the details clearly enough. The photo was shot through the window. I didn’t dare go out. He had a long tail, really long with a black tip. I could see small dots on his fur.

It gave me the impression that it had the fluff of a young animal,” describes Ms. Émond.

The feline was coming out of the woods, a few dozen meters from her house, located a little less than 200 metres from highway 132. The house of Marie-France Émond and her husband, Pierre Labrie, is situated on the north side of highway 132, while the Bay des Chaleurs is located on the south side.

“He stopped in front of the window. It was as if he was looking at us through the window. Seated, he looked tall. He was long, slender (when walking). The animal was in no hurry. He was not scared. He was going towards the bay. Then, he went back to the woods, on the neighbour’s (property),” adds Ms. Émond.

She and Pierre Labrie have four children. Besides having cats, they also own a Labrador dog. “Our dog weighs about 70 pounds. I spotted him where the cat had been seen. When I compare the photos, I would say that the feline weighs about 50 pounds, that he measures one metre in length, without the tail,” notes Pierre Labrie.

He admits being a bit stressed because of their four children. Pierre Labrie has vivid memories of a stay in the back country of Madeleine, a village located on the north side of the Gaspé Peninsula. “I was 10 years of age at the time. I saw two cougars on the shore of the lake,” he says.

Biologist Daniel Sigouin still shows a keen interest in cougars, even though Forillon National Park is not taking part in a research project specific to the big feline.

“It took some time before being able to do the comparison exercise carried out by Pierre Labrie himself. Mr. Sigouin would like to compare the feline to objects that are measurable.

He stresses that over eight seasons of evidence collecting spanning between 2003 and 2010, six samples of cougar hair were picked up along rubbing posts installed in several spots of Forillon National Park.

“There were two samples in 2004, in August and November, two in 2007, in July and September, and two in 2009, in May and August,” he points out.

The Forillon National Park project had been set up in collaboration with a researcher wanting to check for the presence of cougars in many regions, including the Gaspé Peninsula. Three stations were installed for the purpose of collecting cougar hair. No camera was installed. The bait used to lure the felines towards rubbing posts was cougar urine.

“In all the cases, it was an eastern cougar,” says Daniel Sigouin about the six hair samples. DNA tests were accurate enough at the time to make the distinction between western and eastern cougars. However, the quality of the samples did not reveal everything.

“We can’t say if there was more than one cougar. The state of the samples, which could have been outside for several days, left to the elements, didn’t clarify that point,” says Mr. Sigouin.

The Forillon observation project was stopped in 2010.

“The initial objective was to detect its presence. With six detections in eight years, we could not go further than make the ‘presence-absence’ exercise. It is not a viable wild population. Without population clues, we could not go further, even though we would have liked to continue the research under its actual form (the form of 2003-2010),” explains Mr. Sigouin.

And elsewhere?

Gilles Gagné

GASPÉ – The eastern cougar has not been seen in the whole of the eastern part of the United States for quite a long time. It is considered an extinct species. “The last observations go back more than 70 years,” notes Daniel Sigouin.

The situation is no better in New Brunswick, which shares a border with the Gaspé Peninsula and Nova Scotia. “No detection has occurred in both cases,” adds Mr. Sigouin, referring to scientifically proven occurrences.

The biologists of Forillon National Park keep an eye on possible cougar detections while working on a project assessing the populations of lynx and fishers. Thirty-seven stations have been baited. Some stations are equipped with cameras.

“We may notice a (cougar) passage if there is one. It could give us a chance,” adds Mr. Sigouin.

On Youtube, it is possible to see a very short video shot in the third range of New Richmond in 2012. It shows a big feline, possibly a cougar. The feline seems quite big and has a long tail. The title is “Cougars New Richmond 2012”.

The nature and consequences of this exemption are the following:

• the nature of the minor exemption is to modify the resolution 12-12-41 so that the derogation on increasing the maximum height of one floor in two allowed in the M-416 zone is also to build a single family dwelling or dwelling two family required by the zoning By-Law 1156-11;

GASPE – The Queen Mary 2, the longest transatlantic passenger ship ever built, made a memorable stop in the bay of Gaspé on October 7. Thousands of people gathered to see the pride of the Cunard Line, which stayed anchored for 10 hours about a mile off the coast.

Practically all of the ship’s 2,691 passengers, 2,404 to be exact, came ashore for the occasion, as the temperature reached 25 degrees. The bright sun lit up the coloured leaves of the mountains surrounding Gaspé. It was the equivalent of a hot summer day more than two weeks into the fall.

Tom Taylor, a passenger from Red Bank, New Jersey, probably summarized it best - a day that came close to perfection for him, for fellow passengers, the crew, the employees of Escalé Gaspésie and most ship watchers that stopped to have a glimpse at the gigantic vessel.

“We love it here. It is my first time. I have been on 16 cruises before. Everything is fine, the scenery, the stores, the weather. Everything is beautiful. I am not disappointed by anything. You can’t beat it. I will be back here,” said Mr. Taylor, a retired Navy member who was travelling with his wife Michelle.

The SPEC met Mr. Taylor on one of the tenders linking the vessel and the shore, just before the area’s journalists were welcomed to visit the 12-year-old ship.

On board, a restaurant follows a pub, which leads to a ballroom, followed by a cinema, a concert hall, a bar, a disco, then another dining room and so on. It was quiet when the SPEC was on board, as most passengers were visiting downtown Gaspé, Forillon National Park or Percé. Up to 840 people took a guided tour to Percé or Forillon National Park.

“Our largest dining room, the Britannia, can hold up to 1,300 people in one sitting. They can sit over three levels. Dinner is served between 6 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. We have 200 people in the kitchen,” explains Hinano Yeo, who is part of the Queen Mary 2 marketing team.

The size of the cabins or larger accommodations varies immensely, just like their price. A single cabin measures approximately 25 square metres but a “duplex” covers 300 square metres and can cost $30,000, sometimes more, for a 14-day-trip.

However, people don’t have to be rich to board the ship. “Some transatlantic crossings are available for $3,000. Shorter trips can cost $1,000 per person, and you add $750 for a double accommodation,” explains Ms. Yeo. Taking an “interior” cabin, without a porthole, is a way to reduce travelling costs.

Southampton, in England, is the port of call of the Queen Mary 2. “New York is our second home port,” she adds.

The Queen Mary 2 had made previous stops in Quebec City and Saguenay prior to the first ever Gaspé call, and was going back to New York after a stop in Halifax. A return to Southampton was scheduled after New York. Some passengers from Scotland who took part in the Gaspé visit were in the middle of a 28-day Southampton to Southampton loop at that time.

Hinano Yeo is currently in the middle of her 25th year for Cunard Line. “I spent 17 years on the Queen Elizabeth 2 and I have now worked seven years on the Queen Mary 2”, says the lady from Singapore, where she still lives when she is on holiday.

“I work four months on the ship and I am off two months,” she adds, while proudly displaying the advantages of the Queen Mary 2.

“IT is a spacious ship. The Queen Mary 2 was the largest passenger ship in the world when it was launched in 2004. Our capacity is 2,691 passengers and we have 1,300 crew members. It is a ratio of two passengers for one crew member. It is the lowest ratio on big passenger ships,” explains Ms. Yeo.

Her colleague Inigo Ayuso, a Spaniard who is a voyage sales manager on the ship, points out that the few vessels matching or coming close to the Queen Mary in size are carrying 4,000 and even close to 5,000 passengers.

Currently, the largest passenger ship in the world is the Freedom of the Seas, launched in 2006 in Finland. She has a capacity of 4,515 passengers.

Her gross tonnage, a measure of volume, of 154,407 tonnes beats the 148,528 tonnes of the Queen Mary 2. At 1,132 feet, the Queen Mary 2 is 20 feet longer than the Freedom of the Seas.

However, the Freedom of the Seas is considered a cruise ship first and foremost, making shorter trips mainly under tropical and equatorial latitudes. The Queen Mary 2 makes more ocean crossings than any other passenger ship in the world and its southern cruises represent a relatively limited fraction of her schedule.

“Travelling with us provides a trip that is definitely quieter,” sums up Inigo Ayuso.

A comeback in 2017

“The ship will return to the Saint Lawrence next year and Gaspé will be a port of call,” added Mr. Inigo when asked about the degree of satisfaction of Cunard Line’s management. He also seems confident to come back in 2018.

Travelling with Cunard Line clearly pleases Maxine Bernstein, a retired New York teacher, who was spending her 3,053rd day on one of four Cunard Line ships on October 7. That is the equivalent of almost eight-and-a-half years! She is the company’s “most travelled guest,” or most active living member.

“I was onboard for 10 world cruises (…) I love the quality, the variety (found on the company’s ships). We are travelling at a good speed too,” she explains.

The quality and variety of men. “Usually, men can find ladies and dance”. There are 5,000 works of art on the ship. There is also a 900 seat concert hall and a 550 seat cinema. A number of bands play every evening or night in one of the ship’s locations.

Culture is very important on the ship. Every day, we have lectures from historians, politicians and scientists,” underlines Hinano Yeo.

Escale Gaspésie, the body in charge of greeting passengers in Gaspé, prepared a thorough program of activities in the downtown area for the Queen Mary 2 travellers. The departure of the ship was made under fireworks at about 7 p.m.
The Made in... series profiles locally created products available throughout the Gaspé Peninsula.

CASCAPEDIA-ST. JULES - “I’ve been fishing with my dad for as long as I can remember, but every time I step in the canoe, I almost fall on my face. Every canoe I step into is a tipsy canoe,” and so was born the inspiration for Caitlin Barter’s company name.

Raised in Cascapedia, Caitlin studied at Bishop’s University to become a teacher. She recently returned to the region after spending a year teaching in a Cree community in Northern Quebec. When she is not creating her custom painted paddles, she teaches English language arts and art at New Richmond High School.

Caitlin Barter has been painting since the age of 12. As an art teacher, she encourages her students to use different mediums and in her own venture to explore alternative mediums, she decided to paint a canoe paddle. Describing herself as “horribly nostalgic”, Caitlin chose to paint a paddle that had once belonged to her grandfather.

Her father, Joe Barter, sanded down and stained the old paddle and Caitlin added her custom geometrical and colourful design. “I thought it was a really cool way to keep a little memento, a little piece of him, but to vamp it up in a striking and different way. For me, it was a really nice balance of old and new, traditional and modern,” she explains.

Soon, Caitlin Barter found herself painting some paddles for her friends when her father showed off the concept to the manager of Camp Brulé, where both Caitlin’s father and mother, Sue, work. The manager commissioned Caitlin to do some pieces to help commemorate the record catches at the Camp replacing the long standing tradition of using a wooden salmon cut-out to do the same. Shortly thereafter, Caitlin set up shop and Tipsy Canoe Designs was officially born.

When asked about what inspires her designs, Caitlin’s answer is testament to her Gaspesian upbringing. “I like to say that my inspiration for anything I create is the forest and waves. I think it all comes back to growing up here on the coast with all the strong images of the mountains, forests, rivers, and the bay. I want my paddles to resonate with the imagery of the coast.”

While Caitlin Barter’s creations are truly beautiful and worthy of a spot on the wall, they are also entirely practical. Caitlin says, “I really like the idea of creating something that’s versatile - a product that looks kick-ass on the wall, but something you can also bring along with you in the canoe.”

Caitlin’s father Joe is an active participant in Caitlin’s creative process. As she does not yet have an official paddle supplier, Caitlin relies on her father to supply, sand and stain the paddle in preparation for application of the paint design. Caitlin then selects a colour scheme and then she “sees where it takes me.” Once the design is taped off, she will apply four or five coats of paint and after touching it up, will set the painted design with several coats of varnish. Each paddle requires 8 to 10 hours of work to complete.

CALLING ALL HUNTERS...
The Way We Were

Memories,
Like the corners of my mind
Misty, water-coloured memories
Of the way we were.
Scattered pictures
Of the smiles we left behind.
Smiles we gave to one another
For the way we were.
Can it be that it was all
So simple then
Or has time re-written every line?
If we had the chance to
Do it all again
Tell me, would we? Could we?

Do you recognize these beautifully poignant lyrics from a blockbuster movie from 1973? Hint: It was a doomed love story and starred Barbra Streisand and Robert Redford. I will reveal the name of the movie at the end of this week’s column.

Before that I want to invoke some ‘misty water-coloured’ Gaspesian memories for you. If you can remember all, or most, of these, I can probably figure out how old you are. Oh, yes these are for the most part things that I remember, so you too can figure out my age. Hint: I am younger than Hazel McCallion but older than Philippe Couillard.

Washboards
Wringers washers
Kerosene lamps
Laying out the dead at home
Homemade quilts
Outhouses
Party lines
Square dancing
Pumping your water
Homemade bread rising on the wood stove
Sound of the screen door banging
Making toast over the fire in the wood stove
Fortunes told by loose tea leaves
Riding on top of the hay wagon
Jumping in the hayman
Buying candy by the pound
Visiting the dump to watch the bears
Sticky things that hang from the ceiling to catch flies
Slading on snow hills on a piece of cardboard
A new hat for church on Easter Sunday
Bonfires on the beach
The fish man going door to door
Milkcans
A brick warmed in the oven to keep your feet warm in bed
Pantry full of homemade ginger snaps and cakes
Dipping your toast in molasses
Lump of coal in the toe of your Christmas stocking

Well I hope this brought back some memories for you and I invite you to send in additional Gaspesian memories to SPEC.

Oh, yes, the name of the movie is ‘The Way We Were.’

LM:

very attractive. GE made a move to buy LM before another potential buyer,” analyzes Mr. Boulay.

General Electric and LM Wind Power were somewhat in the same position in their respective fields, a wind mill turbine builder not involved in the manufacturing of other parts, like towers, blades and nacelles, and a blade manufacturer not involved in the fabrication of other components, like turbines.

Alexandre Boulay is not worried about the possibility that some of GE’s competitors, like Germany-based Senvion, a company that has regularly ordered at the Gaspé plant, will commission their blades somewhere else, considering that GE and Senvion are pitted against each other to sell turbines. Senvion also fabricates some of its blades, but also outsources for a portion of its needs.

“LM will remain an independent entity. We will keep our name. We will continue to operate autonomously. I don’t think we will be affected. Some turbine builders opt for a mix (or their own blades and outsourced blades). LM is the biggest independent blade manufacturer in the world. GE has other clients. We will keep making blades for turbine builders other than GE,” emphasizes Alexandre Boulay.

LM Wind Power employs 6,300 people worldwide, including 285 people in Gaspé. That plant’s work force was 200 people until the end of the summer but the multi-year contract signed to supply GE with blades exported to the United States prompted LM to hire and train 85 additional workers.
CIRADD studies the LGBTQ reality in the region

Wendy Dawson

NEW RICHMOND - Recently, CIRADD (Centre d'initiative à la recherche et d'aide au développement durable) located in Carleton-sur-Mer, was mandated to participate in a world-wide research project on the segregation that affects the lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer (LGBTQ) community.

The research project is being co-ordinated by the Research Chair on homophobia from the Université de Québec à Montréal and is being funded by the Council of Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council who have committed $2.5 million dollars to the study that is to take place over a 7 year period.

The scope of the project is very large and will bring together a total of 54 academic researchers and 48 different institutional partners from Quebec, France, Belgium and Switzerland.

The study has three overall goals:

1) To document the various ways that the LGBTQ community experiences social inclusion and exclusion;
2) To document the lifestyle realities of the LGBTQ community in different age groups;
3) To analyze the effect of different policies put into effect since the 1960’s by the Quebec provincial government meant to include the LGBTQ community.

Laurence Lépine, one of the lead researchers for CIRADD on the project states that the study is the subject of great international interest. According to Mr. Lépine, Québec and Canada have been shining examples on an international level when it comes to the inclusion of the LGBTQ community into the mainstream. “Quebec,” he adds, “was the first province to prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation.

While some of the finer points regarding the role of CIRADD have yet to be established some priorities for the research have already been identified. “The project aims to cover Quebec as a whole, so the data regarding the situation in the regions, including the Gaspé Peninsula – Magdalen Islands is important.”, adds Mr. Lépine.

CIRADD has already participated in a series of surveys pertaining to the LGBTQ community in the region of the Gaspé Peninsula and Magdalen Islands – the first study of its kind that provided recommendations specific to a territory for the better inclusion of sexual minorities in a rural region.

The compilation of those statistics and a summary of that data was recently presented at the LGBTQ Baie des Chaleurs Grand Rassemblement event (the Great Gathering) that took place at Pin Rouge on September 9, 10 and 11.

The presentation of the data acquired by CIRADD to the participants of that event was very sobering and demonstrated that there is still quite a way to go before LGBTQ community is comfortably integrated into mainstream society as statistics demonstrate there is still high incidence of feelings of isolation, suicidal thoughts, verbal violence and bullying among its members.

CIRADD’s existing data and experience within the LGBTQ community will ensure their valuable contribution to the SA Voirs sur l’inclusion et l’exclusion des personnes LGBTQ study that will continue until 2023.

HYDROCARBONS:

when it is time to intervene.

He added that the eight First Nations of Quebec are supporting the position of the Innu, the Mi’gmaq and the Malecite “through adopting motions.”

He refuses to make a link between the eventual presence of Native leaders in front of a drill, to civil disobedience. “We are showing civil obedience. There are principles; it comes from the heart.”

Chief Jean-Charles Piétacho emphasizes that over each of the last two years, Quebec’s commercial fishing industry has generated 6,953 jobs, mostly in the Gaspé Peninsula, on the North Shore and in the Magdalen Islands.

Revenues of $647 million were generated. The Mi’gmaq, the Innu and the Malecite are drawing significant income from commercial fisheries since the Marshall decision from the Supreme Court in 1999.

“The Saint Lawrence river and the salmon rivers are also part of tourism development. People come a long way to fish salmon on Gaspeian rivers. Fracturing and chemical stimulation are too risky for the sources of drinkable water”, she points out.

Chief Jacques Tremblay, of the Viger Malecite, near Rivière-du-Loup, cautions while mentioning the Deepwater Horizon tragedy in the gulf of Mexico that “a mere disaster will have a funnel effect. It would be unrecoverable, in time.”

Attending the declaration of the three chiefs, the mayor of Gaspé, Daniel Côté, gave them his support. “We are paddling in the same direction.”, he said.

The 13 Native communities represented in the new coalition gather about 28,000 members.

In the Gaspé Peninsula, chiefs Darcy Gray, of Listuguj, and Roderick Larocque, of Gesgapegiag, also signed the agreement against the development of oil and gas exploration on Anticosti Island, in the gulf of Saint Lawrence and in Haldimand, an area of the town of Gaspé.

“My view of the ancestral rights of the Mi’gmaq Nation, no resource development project can go forward on our territory without our free, informed prior consent,” points out in writing Darcy Gray, also president of the Mi’gmaqes Mawiomi Secretariat, a development body common to the three Native communities of the region.

The governments and corporations seeking to exploit the resources on our territory have an obligation to take our rights into consideration. That has never been done,” adds Mr. Gray.

Fall Festival Volunteer of the Year

To make any event run smoothly we depend on our great volunteers.

At the 16th edition of the fall festival this was once again very true. Every year we pick a person to say a special thank you to. This year we thank Francois Blais who among other things was the head of security once again.

Francois dedicated many hours before and throughout the great weekend. Some of his tasks included putting up the tent and the surrounding fences, picnic tables and all the things needed to make any event run smoothly.

Where would we be without all our faithful volunteers?

Congratulations Francois from all of us.

Social notes...

Farewell to Tanya Edwards who has moved to Alberta. Tanya, we’ll miss your bright and cheerful face around town. We wish you much success in all that you pursue!

Peter, Mona & Mandy Douglass enjoyed a scenic drive around Cape Breton, N.S. They returned home then Mona & daughter Courtney left for a once in a lifetime holiday in Ireland.

The annual Harvest Supper was held at the Anglican Church on September 15. This is a rural tradition and as usual with End Bechevaise at the helm, the event ran like clockwork.

Paula Sinclair and Mark Istead, Barrie, Ont. Jannett (Beebe) and Randy Main, Toronto were home to visit Alta Main and other family members.

Diane Skinner Flowers has returned home to Ontario after spending the summer months in New Carlisle. Diane had a great time connecting with family and friends. Much to the delight of her many fans she contributed entertaining articles to Spec.

Dorothy Beck, a life-long resident of Paspébiac, and spouse of the late Charlie Beck, passed away September 4 at Maria Hospital. She was 90.

Our condolences go out to Lise Loisel and son Anthony.

Municipal Inspector Gregory Prentice has retired after many years of working for the town. We wish Greg all the best in his retirement.

Best wishes to Helen Sawyer and Fern Astles who were hospitalized in Quebec City. We hope each day brings you comfort and the amazing and wonderful comments received regarding the supper. Thanks again.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin (never known to fail)

O most beautiful flower of Mount Carmel, fruitful vine, splendour of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God. Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity.

O Star of the Sea, help me and show me that you are my Mother. O Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of heaven and earth, I humbly beseech you, from the bottom of my heart, to succour me in my necessity (make request). There are none who can withstand your power. O Mary conceived without sin, Pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this prayer in your hands (3 times). Say this prayer for 3 consecutive days and publish, and it will be granted to you.
