Canada Day celebrations typically include parades and fireworks, however, your dog will never thank you for the fireworks. People celebrate with barbecues and you will see of the year (December 2018). They won their second Olympic medal in Korea with a record setting score. Its already in the news as parties vie for your vote, but the federal election will be held on October 21, 2019. The Liberal Party will try to hang on to power with the Conservatives currently looking as strong contenders. The big issues are immigration, carbon taxes and the economy. Well, we can all speculate about what will happen between this Canada Day, 2019 and the next Canada Day, 2020. Certainly, politics and weather will be in the headlines and the intersection of those two. Will politicians in Canada and elsewhere make some bold and difficult moves to stop the devastating effects of climate change? Let's hope they have the awareness and courage to make those hard decisions. Have a great Canada Day, 2019!

Canadian flags and other red and white items sported everywhere. Dogs won't mind the barbecue or the flags.

Do you feel that the year since the last Canada Day has flown by? It has, but many things have happened. The news is mostly dire. The climate, the stability of certain world leaders, the economic forecast, the rising cost of fuel and food fill the news daily. But the world keeps turning and people still go about their daily lives. How did Canada fare since July 1, 2018? What has dominated our news?

The top Canadian news story of 2018 was the tragic Humboldt Broncos bus crash. The team was on its way to a playoff game in April 2018 when their bus and a truck collided killing 16 people and injuring 13.

The expansion of Kinder Morgan's Trans Mountain pipeline was one of the most heated issues in Canadian politics over the past year. Recently the federal government approved the pipeline and construction could start as early as September, however, that fight is not over. Prepare to hear more in the coming months as

Deficit in Grand River

Nelson Sergerie

GRAND RIVER: - Grand River has completed its fiscal year 2018 with a deficit of $145,000. The operations resulted in a $5,000 surplus on a budget of just over $5 million, but the repayment of a debt explains this negative balance sheet.

"It was decided to take $150,000 from the accumulated surplus to repay the loan. This amount is accounted for as an expense," explains Mayor Gino Cyr.

The accumulated surplus decreased from $223,000 to $48,000. The municipality's debt was $11.3 million as of December 31.

Gaspé launches tourist season

L'ANSE-AU-GRIFFON - Nearly 100 people attended the launch of Destination Gaspé's 2019 tourist season on June 13. Under the theme Gaspé pur plaisir, the guests were able to discover the novelties of the next season in addition to tasting local products made by artisans of the municipality. The website gaspepurplaisir.ca was launched where people can find tourist information but also information to encourage people to settle in the town.

Chandler wants a bike path

Nelson Sergerie

CHANDLER - Chandler wants to create a network of bike paths to connect the six neighbourhoods, a project valued between $10 million and $12 million.

The project dates back to the current council election in 2017. A project manager was hired to build the track, which would also be a tourist tour of attractions from Newport to Saint-François.

A firm is mandated to determine the route of forty kilometers. "The firm will have to make the route and then we will place the tourist attractions along the route that will be recommended," says the pro-Mayor, Bruno-Pierre Godbout.

The study, at a cost of $14,000, should be filed in two months. "We want to have the route as quickly as possible to take advantage of the pre-election momentum to submit the project to Canada Economic Development and Tourism Quebec," said the elected representative of Newport.

"For several years, we've had a great recreational tourism offer, but we also want to give added value to our citizens who are here throughout the year.

Baie des Chaleurs Car Rally to be held between June 28 and July 1

Gilles Gagné

NEW RICHMOND: – Approximately 35 teams from all over North America are expected to take part in the 42nd Baie des Chaleurs Car Rally, which will take place between June 28 and July 1 along the roads of New Richmond and the surrounding area. For the fourth consecutive year, international teams from the FIA NACAM-NRC circuit will participate in the event. The Baie des Chaleurs Car Rally will also feature teams competing in the Canadian Rally Championship, the Eastern Canada Rally Championship, the Championnat MaritimeEst of Quebec and the Quebec Championship.

A long-time multi-winner of the North American, Canadian and Quebec Championships, Yves Barbe, will race again after 15 years of absence. Last year's Canadian Championship winner, Karel Carré, will also compete in New Richmond this year, as well as local competitor Mickaël Bujold, who came pretty close to a position on the podium last year at the Rocky Mountain Rally. Two veterans of the Baie des Chaleurs Car Rally, Joël Levac and Jean-Sébastien Besner, are also coming back to New Richmond. The organizing committee puts a lot of emphasis on two of the crowd's favourite events, the Camp Brûlé passage and the Fifth Range jump. The Camp Brûlé spot has been revisited to greet more people, to feature more animation and offer of a better view of the cars. It will be open at 5:00 pm on June 28. As for the Fifth Range jump, it will be open to the public at 10:00 am the following morning. Spectators will be able to see each team three times at those two spots.

Police report

Judge Guylaine Tremblay, of the Quebec Court, rendered a verdict of guilty in the case of Renée Toupin, 54, from Trois-Rivières charged with criminal harassment against Gaspesian singer Kevin Parent. The case involved incidents that occurred between 2015 and 2017 when the accused approached Kevin Parent on four different occasions. She also visited his backstage room in Joliette.

The decision was made public on June 17 at the Trois-Rivières courthouse. Initially the decision was scheduled to be rendered on March 27 but the judge had been injured in an accident and was on sick leave at the time. During the trial, the singer testified that he feared for his safety.

It was not the first time Renée Toupin attempted to get closer to Kevin Parent. In 2004 and 2007, she entered his Carleton house to say that she loved him. A first trial was held following those incidents but the accused was judged non-criminally responsible of her acts. Judge Tremblay specified that the previous case was not taken into account in her latest decision.

Judge Tremblay ordered the preparation of a pre-sentence report and scheduled the next court appearance for October 9. (With information provided by the FM 98.5 radio station in Trois-Rivières)

Isabelle Bujold, 22, from Paspebiac faces charges of assault and uttering death threats against a child under her responsibility in her daycare, for which she is seeking accreditation. She was arrested on June 18 and kept in custody until her June 18 court appearance at the New Carlisle courthouse. The events for which she was charged allegedly occurred on June 17. The child was not injured. Isabelle Bujold entered a plea of non-guilty. Judge Celestina Almeida, of the Quebec Court, imposed conditions tied to her release, including not being in the presence of children in a daycare setting until further notice. The accused will return to court on August 12.

A Maria house located on Verdiers Street was destroyed by a June 18 fire. The alarm was sounded at 4:10 p.m. Firefighters from Carleton joined their Maria colleagues to extinguish the fire. Sûreté du Québec officers were asked to assist the firefighters. "A cooking fire could have started the blaze. The Maria firefighters are still investigating the case but foul play is ruled out," says Sûreté du Québec spokesperson Sgt. Claude Doiron.

Quebec Court Judge Célestina Almeida approved a request made by Crown Prosecutor Florence Frappier-Routhier to assess the aptitude of Jimmy Lévesque to stand trial. He is a 38-year-old man from Dalhousie charged with armed robbery following a theft perpetrated in a Nouvelle house on March 19.

GASPÉ: 30% increase to asphalt streets

Nelson Sergerie

GASPÉ - Since the price of asphalt has increased by 30% in Gaspé, the town council has decided to withdraw four streets from the scheduled list in order to fit the costs in the budget planned for 2019.

Eurovia is the only company to have made a proposal and it was above $645,000 for paving streets while the Town's estimate was $500,000.

"Are we paying the bill? No. Items were removed from the contract. There are citizens who will have to wait another year to see their asphalt rebuilt. It's not our fault," says Mayor Daniel Côté.

In recent years, Nascau, which had an asphalt plant in Chandler, influenced prices, which had saved Gaspé $330,000 over three years, however, the company pulled out of Gaspé.

"We saw it. When there is competition, the price goes down. Suddenly, we come back into a monopoly situation and suddenly the prices come back 30%. In Quebec, it's not much better."

Investigation?

The mayor believes that there may be a collective movement to fight against these methods.

"The MTQ (Transport Ministry) is having trouble.

Fair

laven

Adams Street won't be included in the repairs for 2019.

The cities have needs. Everyone has needs in asphalting. At a certain point, we become a bit annoyed," says the mayor.

We must find a solution, according to the elected official: "We will challenge Quebec on this. We will not be the only municipality. All municipalities live the same problem. Have we reached the stage where Quebec should declare a commission of inquiry on asphalt?" asks Mr. Côté, who rejects the explanation for the increase in the price of bitumen since this component is only one element of asphalt.

Jimmy Lévesque appeared in court on June 19 in New Carlisle and informed Judge Almeida that he would represent himself from now on. He was represented until then by Carleton lawyer, Ariane Cayer. Lévesque made comments in court that puzzled the tribunal on June 17 and June 19. As SPEC was reaching its June 21 deadline, he was scheduled to return to court.

Jimmy Lévesque and Michel Perron, 52, from Campbellton, allegedly stormed into the house of an elderly couple on the night of March 19 and left with various objects of value. The victims were tied but not injured. The suspects were located when a vehicle looking like the car seen by the victims was abandoned along a road near Dalhousie. Both men were arrested by Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers a few days after the crime. They have been in custody since March. As for Michel Perron, he will also return to court on August 12, for his pro forma preliminary hearing. He and his lawyer, Michael Bernard, have opted for a trial in front of a judge and jury.

Commentary

Gilles Gagné

Is it possible to play both sides?

It wasn't much of a surprise when on June 18 Prime Minister Justin Trudeau announced that his government is giving the green light to the expansion of the Trans Mountain pipeline.

He is consequently misleading Canadians. He has stated repeatedly over recent months that it is possible to fight climate change without obstructing the economic development tied to the hydrocarbon industry. The Trans Mountain pipeline project proves that those statements are false.

A summary of recent history might be of some help here. The Canadian government bought the pipeline on May 29, 2018 at a cost of $4.5 billion. That decision came a month after the announcement by the former owner of the pipeline, Kinder Morgan, that the expansion of Trans Mountain was no longer in the company's plans for a set of reasons. Profitability, or lack thereof, was one of those reasons.

The expansion cost of the pipeline was evaluated at $7.4 billion in the spring of 2018. A closer look at the file recently made by the federal government's Parliamentary Director of budget propels that cost to $9.3 billion. That potential bill is labelled in 2019 dollars. There are many court cases underway that aim to block the expansion of Trans Mountain, including one being launched by the government of British Columbia, and others by certain Indigenous communities. It must also be mentioned that some Native communities support the pipeline expansion.

Justin Trudeau affirms that the expansion of the Trans Mountain pipeline will not lead to an expansion of oil production in Alberta and Saskatchewan. That is false. The expansion stems directly from some oil producers who will to raise their tar sands oil output. It has always been clear. Canada's prime minister is playing on words when he says that the production would increase without the Trans Mountain expansion.

Justin Trudeau is also misleading Canadians when he says that the profits of an expanded pipeline will be invested in ways to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

First, it is far from certain that an expanded Trans Mountain pipeline will be profitable. The Canadian government will have to pay back a debt load of at least $13.8 billion, $4.5 billion for the acquisition and $9.3 billion for the expansion, before breaking even with the initiative.

Secondly, the expansion of the pipeline capacity will increase greenhouse gas emissions by 13 million tonnes yearly, and maybe as much as 15 million tonnes, according to the expert of the Canadian Environmental Assessment Agency, a neutral organization. It is the equivalent of a three million car increment on Canadian roads. The exploitation of tar sands oil emits more polluting gases than conventional hydrocarbons, to cap the matter.

So chances are that the hypothetical profits of the pipeline will not even cover the measures that will be required to deal with the increment in polluting emissions caused by Trans Mountain alone. We are far from combating current emissions. In fact, despite Justin Trudeau's statements, Canada will surely miss on respecting its greenhouse gas reduction commitment made in Paris in 2015.

The pipeline operators will have to keep its user's fees low if it is to keep its customers. Those customers produce one of the most expensive hydrocarbons in the world. Their profit margin is currently very low or non-existent. The oil industry is far from the industry of the future, as numerous countries are trying to reduce or phase out their hydrocarbon consumption.

Justin Trudeau says that the goal of his government is to sell Trans Mountain once it is expanded and running. That will not happen before at least 2022, considering the high number of legal handicaps.

Who will pay more than $14 billion for a pipeline that cannot charge high user fees to an ailing industry characterized by some of the highest pro-

It is therefore certain that the acquisition of Trans Mountain by the Canadian government was far from a good business decision, despite Justin Trudeau's affirmation to that effect. We must keep in mind that not one private investor showed up when Kinder Morgan put it up for sale in April 2018. Even Mr. Trudeau admitted that the expansion project would have died without his government's intervention.

Truth be told, the June 18 expansion announcement was a political move, four months before the October 21 federal election, and even that might not yield satisfactory results. Very few people in Alberta and Saskatchewan will opt to vote for the Liberal Party because of the pipeline acquisition and expansion, and Mr. Trudeau stands a much bigger chance of alienating the people who would normally have voted for him in British Columbia, and people who care about the environment elsewhere in Canada.

Town of Gaspé to sell properties for $1

GASPÉ: - The Town of Gaspé will sell 10 properties at a starting price of $1 each in order to stimulate the construction of multi-dwelling buildings and, therefore, reduce the effect of the housing shortage that has limited the establishment of new residences over the last three years. The properties are located near the airport on de L'Envol Street. Their municipal value ranges from $36,500 to $45,000. The town administration will assess propositions based on three criteria: the number of units per property, the time it will take to realize the projects, and the price offered for the land, since the base price of $1 can be enhanced.

"Every week, we have workers and families that go back to where they came from because they can't find lodging. It is a huge blow to the demographic and economic development of the town," says Daniel Côté, mayor of Gaspé.

The vacancy rate of the Greater Gaspé area stands at 1.2% while the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation specifies that a balanced rate should be between 3% and 4%.

"It is 1.2% in the Greater Gaspé area if we take into account the farthest communities like Anse-à-Valleau, 40 minutes from the downtown area but the vacancy rate is zero in that downtown area," adds Mr. Côté.

Gaspé has experienced an economic boom since 2016. LM Wind Power, the manufacturer of windmill blades, doubled its capacity between the summer of 2016 and the winter of 2017, a move that propelled its labour force from 200 to 485 people.

ple and are always looking manpower. Groupe for Ohméga, an engineering firm, is also experiencing regular expansion.

Daniel Côté is confident that the selling of properties for a nominal amount of money or for a price inferior to the municipal value is worth it. The tax revenues will soon be recouped.

"It will depend on the starting price offered by the developers we select but it will be paid back in three to five years," he says, referring to municipal taxes that will stem from the new buildings. Zoning rules in the Envol Street area don't allow the construction of buildings larger than triplexes because of the capacity of the septic tanks allowed there.

Before launching the call for tenders process, the mayor talked to three potential developers. "They all showed interest," he says, convinced that a larger survey would have yielded more interest.

The project could lead to the building of 30 new dwellings in the town of 15,000 inhabitants. How many additional dwellings would it take to solve the current shortage of housing?

"We haven't done an exhaustive study but there is probably enough demand for 100 units. In 2008-2009, 100 new units were built in Gaspé, because of the adoption of a private bill by the (Quebec) government so that the Town could provide direct incentives instead of selling discounted pieces of land. At the time, those incentives had given good results. The economic boom is stronger now than in 2008. So another set of 100 units would help solve our shortage problem," ex-

The expansion of LM Wind Power in 2016 created 285 additional jobs at the plant. It was the start of an economic boom that has not relented. Photo: G. Gagné plains Mr. Côté.

Earlier this year, the Town of Gaspé tried to convince the National Assembly to adopt another private bill to allow the municipal administration to hand out direct incentives but the legislative program was too busy to hear that request.

"It is postponed until the fall and we will ask for it again. It is certain (...) In fact, it is that delay that prompted the municipal council to move. We could have adopted a waiting mode but the effects of the shortage are too acute for that," concludes Mr. Côté.

Housing developers now have a month to respond to the Town of Gaspé call for tenders. They can also submit projects for more than one piece of land, and even for all. Another call for tenders will be launched later if some of the pieces of land are still available.

The unit price of each property will be raised to $2,500 on January 1, 2020, and to $5,000 six months later, if some of them are still up for grabs.

Guy Gallant becomes new director general of UPA for the Gaspé Peninsula and Magdalen Islands

Gilles Gagné

NEW RICHMOND: – Mayor of Saint-Alexis and prefect of the Avignon MRC, Guy Gallant, is becoming the new director general of the Union des producteurs agricoles of the Gaspé Peninsula and Magdalen Islands (UPA). He will replace Marc Tétreault who is retiring.

Mr. Gallant is also president of the Gaspé Peninsula Table of Prefects. He will step down from the prefect position on June 26 and will start as regional director of the UPA on July 2. His successor will then be elected or designated. Mr. Gallant will remain as mayor of Saint-Alexis.

Aged 51, Guy Gallant is a trained agronomist who owns a cattle farm in Saint-Alexis. He was a dairy farmer for years, and he sold his milk quota in 2016. He has headed the region's syndicate of cattle farmers for several years.

Last fall, he was an independent candidate in Quebec's election. He ran in Bonaventure, his riding, after flirting with the Liberal Party.

"I am coming back to my first career. I liked the work I was doing as a prefect but agriculture is my first love, career-wise, and I am coming back to it full-time," he comments.

Marc Tétreault's retirement was in the plans for a while even if it was not widely known. The selection of his successor came after an open job posting. Five candidates were interested in the position.

He knows that the challenges at UPA are numerous. "We have lost farmers over the years. We have between 250 and 300 producers. We are currently assessing the number of farmers in the region. Some of them are members and some are not. We have lost cattle, dairy and sheep farmers over recent years but we have gained maple syrup and vegetable producers," he points out.

"I have informed the UPA partners that they have to recognize the importance of agriculture for the region. I know that we are far from the markets.

We also have to get the message across to politicians, to the MAPAQ (Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food), to economic development bodies, and to the federal government.

Secondly, I want every producer to make a decent revenue out of farming activities. I am convinced that we must put emphasis on processing our production locally, the way Sylvain Tapp does in Douglastown with his produce (sauerkraut). He even buys input outside the region and processes it here," states Guy Gallant.

Pieridae Energy has money guarantees to close Gaspé wells when necessary

Gilles Gagné

CARLETON: - Responding to worries expressed by Environnement vert plus, the management of Pieridae Energy assures that it has the money to eventually close the Gaspesian wells under its responsibility. There are nine of them and each one has a sum of $150,000 attached to it in order to close it permanently one day.

The company, therefore, complies with the Quebec rule that was valid when those nine wells were drilled. Under the regulation in place before 2017, a guarantee of $150,000 must be deposited for each hydrocarbon well drilled in Quebec. The spokesperson of Environnement vert plus, Pascal Bergeron, has been unsuccessfully trying for weeks to obtain from the Quebec's Department of Energy and Natural Resources the documents proving that Pieridae Energy has the financial means to eventually shut wells that are not productive or not worth further exploration. "We fear that those inactive wells will be closed through public funding if the companies have not deposited the guarantee of $150,000," points out Mr.

_ Bergeron.

Wells that are not permanently closed often emit polluting gases in the air, sometimes for decades. Mr. Bergeron holds proof that the four wells drilled on the Bourque property are covered by the same number of $150,000 guarantees. He doesn't have proof about the five other Pieridae Energy wells, including Haldimand 1, 2 and 4, Le Ber, Tar Point and a sixth well called Wakeham.

Pieridae Energy's deputy manager of regulatory affairs, Félix Théoret, sent SPEC a correspondence exchange between the company and Quebec's hydrocarbons office at the Department of Energy and Natural Resources confirming reception of the money guarantees linked to the eventual closure of five wells out of six, the three Haldimand wells, Le Ber and Tar Point.

"The sixth well, Wakeham, belongs to Junex, now known as Cuda. Pétrolia (acquired by Pieridae in 2017) had conducted the Wakeham project with Junex before ceding control (to Junex)," explains Mr. Théoret.

Guarantees must be renewed yearly, he adds, although the amount of $150,000 is just extended over a longer period. It does not have to be deposited several times. The amount is usually under the responsibility of a third party, like a bank.

The last renewal of Pieridae Energy's guarantees regarding the five wells located near Gaspé took place at the end of April 2019. Félix Théoret sent SPEC a copy of the Energy and Natural Resources letter confirming reception of the guarantees.

Pascal Bergeron remains disappointed but not surprised by the secrecy approach adopted by the Energy and Natural Resources Department, where his requests for information regarding Pieridae Energy's wells have been systematically turned down.

"They (the civil servants) are asking me to revert to the Information Access Commission to get the documents I am asking for. The process will take two-three years and I will probably win," points out Mr. Bergeron, who is convinced that the ministry is using ways to discourage information requests. Félix Théorêt points out that Pieridae Energy expects further drilling at the three Haldimand wells to be forbidden by the Quebec government, a consequence of the new regulation adopted since the fall of 2017.

"Haldimand 2 and Haldimand 4 are located in the urban perimeter protected by the new regulation, and Haldimand 1 is located 50 metres outside that perimeter. We would need permission to drill under the perimeter if we resume exploration in that area," explains Mr. Théoret.

Meanwhile, in the foreseeable future, Pieridae Energy "has no project for Tar Point and Le Ber," he adds, underlining that the firm is concentrating its efforts to land a gas liquefaction plant and marine terminal in Goldboro, Nova Scotia.

Respecting handicap parking spaces

Nelson Sergerie

GASPÉ: A petition has been launched by Jenny Francoeur and Sylvie Bernard, who both have reduced mobility. They are asking drivers to respect designated handicap parking spaces and hope that municipal authorities will be attentive to their requests. They note the flagrant lack of civility of drivers who do not respect the designated spaces.

Their approach is primarily to raise awareness.

"We are asking for more supervision for parking for the handicapped and that merchants adapt for people with reduced mobility," says Francoeur, who has addressed the issue in the past. In 2015, she led a massive campaign that made national media. At the time, the message was embraced by the population, but there has been a gradual relaxation in the past four years.

Hard to reach businesses

Many merchants are making efforts to facilitate access for people with disabilities, but in some places it's difficult. Many parking spaces indicated with a sign or blue on the asphalt are not all in accordance with the law.

"There are steps that, even if it's an inch or two, for us, it's a wall to overcome. You cannot walk around without there being a hazard," says Ms. Bernard, who nevertheless applauds the efforts made by some businesses. . The ladies want the city to better regulate these issues.

Awareness before clamping down

The Town of Gaspé emphasizes that there has been a lot of improvement over the past few years thanks to the Disability Policy.

Mayor Daniel Côté is sensitive to the approach of these two citizens. "There is a question of respect. I still do not understand why people dare not respect that. Before slapping their fingers with a ticket, I think that at the base, people must be minimally made aware of the situation."

The mayor will let the petition do its work, but he warns, "If we need to adopt a repressive measure with regulations, we will do it."

In the meantime, the Town will ensure that its signage is legal. To ensure better access to buildings, Gaspé has put a lot of effort into adapting its own buildings for people with reduced mobility. For commercial buildings, the question is more complex.

"I'm thinking of Queen Street, where space is very limited to make businesses accessible. There are several that are becoming more accessible, but it is the rules of the Régie du bâtiment du Québec that apply," says the mayor.

Planning a perfect picnic

Summer is here and even though the weather does not always agree with that, there will be days when a picnic will be the ideal activity. A little planning ahead can assure a successful outing and make a perfect summer memory. A lovely summer day, fine food and the great outdoors are a perfect trifecta.

Don't ever forget that it is mainly about the food though, so plan accordingly. Try not to serve store prepared store-bought food, because that is not the vibe you should be going for. People may eat the store-bought potato salad and say thank you, but they will sing your praises for home-made potato salad!

First decide in what you will pack the food. If you have a cooler, that's great or a wicker basket adds additional ambiance to the outing. Reusable cold packs are a great idea or small plastic bags of ice, if you must. Food safety is critical. Foods such as egg salad, chicken, or ham must be stored at a cool temperature. Keep that food on ice for as long as possible. Once you lay out the food call everybody over right away to enjoy the meal.

There are other items to tuck into the basket or cooler that will make the day more successful. These may include hand wipes or sanitizing gel, a bag for garbage, small packets of salt and pepper, an opener if needed, and a tablecloth or blanket to put on the ground or picnic table.

Beverages are critical for a successful picnic. Way back in time we would pack Kool-Aid or Freshie with ice in glass bottles, then wrap the bottles in newspaper. What a deliciously quenching memory that is. Water is a great choice and maybe even a thermos of tea or coffee for those who like to sit afterwards and savour the meal.

Try to avoid single use plastics. Reusable containers to hold your food, washable but non-breakable plates, cups and glasses, no plastic straws, will all make you a bonafide friend of this planet. Instead of paper serviettes bring a tea towel. Remember: Be mindful of global issues but act locally. We can all try to do that when possible.

Nothing stirs up an appetite like fresh air, so pack lots of delicious food. You may want to have sandwiches, chicken or even little quiches. Salads are great and there are so many kinds of salad. These include egg salad, garden salad, Greek salad, macaroni salad and chicken salad. You may want to cut up a container of munchable veggies such as carrot sticks, peppers, cucumbers and radishes and take along hummus for dipping. A perfect ending for the meal could be fruit kebabs. You could also add cookies or squares to finish off the meal. Ideal picnic foods include devilled eggs, frozen grapes, roast beef, cheese and lettuce rollups, tea biscuits, muffins and watermelon.

"Dinner and a movie? Forget that. I'd rather have a picnic and a waterfall." Get out there and enjoy the outdoors!

Natascha Joncas' contract not renewed by ESSB

Gilles Gagné

NEW CARLISLE: - The board members of the Eastern Shores School Board will not renew the contract of their director general, Natascha Joncas. The decision was made public on June 19, during the monthly meeting of the school board.

The information was made in-camera though, which means that the public and certain employees of the Eastern Shores School Board (ESSB) were asked to leave the room momentarily. The reasons behind the non-renewal were not divulged by Wade Gifford, chairperson of ESSB.

"The only thing I have to say is that the decision is not to renew her contract and we wish her all the best moving forward. This is all we have to say about it," pointed out Mr. Gifford after the meeting.

When asked to explain, he replied that "this is private information." He added that "it is the same kind of approach we take with any other employee. With other employees, we don't make big statements to the population."

It was a unanimous decision, he pointed out. The contract ends on June 30. Natascha Joncas has not been seen in her role at ESSB since the first week of June, which suggests that a problem arose well before the end of her contract. On June 10, Mr. Gifford explained that Ms. Joncas was "out on family leave right now."

In a written message sent to the staff of ESSB shortly after the June 19 public meeting, Mr. Gifford did not supply more information except to say that Suzanne Ward will continue to act as assistant director general and to thank Ms. Joncas for her service.

Ms. Joncas has not responded to SPEC's invitation to comment further on the situation.

The next public board meeting of ESSB is scheduled for August 20. Natascha Joncas was hired in the summer of 2018. She replaced Howard Miller, who was retiring.

Three Gaspé Poly Students achieve Duke of Edinburgh Bronze Award

Ann Kelly,

Spiritual Animator, ESSB GASPÉ: - Chelsea LeQuesne, Kayla Drohan and Naomi Morin registered for the Duke of Edinburgh award in September 2018.

In October they achieved an adventurous journey on an ESSB organized hiking trip to Parc de la Gaspésie.

Throughout the year they diligently worked on the three other aspects of the award: service, physical recreation and skill.

June 10, at a ceremony in their school, they were awarded their bronze certificate and pin. Those involved in the girls' journey are extremely proud of their accomplishment.

The Duke of Edinburgh Award is the world's leading youth achievement award for Canadian youth. It is an internationally recognized program for young people building their skills to equip them for life and work. By creating opportunities for young people to develop skills, get physically fit, give service and experience adventure, the Award can play a critical role in their development.

Eastern Shores School Board adopted the Duke of Edinburgh Award framework as a tool to enhance students' school experience. Participation in the award is steadily growing. There are currently 30 secondary students within ESSB who are registered. Staff is looking forward to new members next year and hoping to see these three eager participants move up to the silver level.

"Climate change is the lens through which we must see everything"

Jeanie LeLacheur

BARACHOIS: - It's official! Dennis Drainville will run as the Green Party candidate for Gaspesie-Iles-de-la-Madeleine in the upcoming federal election. His campaign launch took place on June 5 at the Barachois Recreation Centre with 25 people in attendance and long-time friend and co-worker François Dumont making introductions. François touched on Mr. Drainville's previous environmental convictions as well as his presence on a local level as a humanities teacher at the Gaspé Cégep for 12 years. He also mentioned the nine years Mr. Drainville spent as the Archbishop of the Anglican Diocese of Quebec during which time he advocated for LGBT rights.

Dennis spoke candidly about erosion. He also made references to the once- thriving commercial cod fishery that was shut down due to depleted cod stocks, the Barachois wharf and the nearby pristine wetland.

"We need to look at what has already been lost, what is now at risk, and the stark choices that are before everybody's eyes," commented Dennis Drainville.

Drought, increased temperatures, forest fires, the loss of biodiversity, and especially the 799 species that have been designated by COSEWIC (inthe cluding endangered Gaspesie caribou and the Atlantic Salmon) were high on the list of issues to be considered and the message he delivered was precise. "Climate change is the lens through which we must see everything, and immediate actions as a coordinated effort from all levels of government in response to it are an absolute necessity."

His response to questions concerning a strategy to involve youth in the movement was to mention that local youth have indeed formed an action oriented group and that he had already met with them and joined them in a walk the previous week.

During discussion period Karl Reinders stated, "The economic benefits of investing in the renewable energy revolution, including his opinion that job creators of the future would likely not be petroleum companies, but those looking to the future of green energy. In his opinion it's time to insist that governments accelerate the transition to clean alternatives." In addition to the climate change issues Mr. Drainville also expressed his concern about the lack of train service in the region for the population.

The lunch following the event had a variety of regional organic products including cheese from Au Pied du Vent from the Magdalens and products from Chef Nicolas, Marcher des Saveurs, Monsieur Émile and Aitkens, Érablière Coté Sucré, Brulerie de l'Atlantique and Robin's. Many generous local supporters also contributed cakes squares and even green cookies.

Although the focus on local doesn't imply support from those mentioned but it does reflect Mr. Drainville's commitment to highlight and encourage the products and their producers. As Green Events unfold in the coming months in different parts of the riding, whenever possible, sampling of local food will be part of the activity.

ESCUMINAC: - A new festival has joined the ranks of the Gaspésie's summer gatherings. On June 14 and 15 Nous trois | Nesisieg | We three was launched by a coalition of groups including the Municipality of Escuminac, Ford New Richmond, CEDEC, CASA, Listuguj, Gesgapegiag, SEPAQ, and Avignon MRC.

The goal of the tri-cultural event was to celebrate the three cultures present in the Avignon MRC: francophone, anglophone and Mi'gmaq while highlighting positive aspects of interculturalism.

On the first day of the festivities well over 100 schoolchildren were treated to a variety of activities at Miguasha Park while on Saturday a community market and music concert were held at the highway stop in Pointe à la Garde. Musicians included MLou, The Gypsy Donkeys, and The Shigawake Groove Band. There were about a dozen tables inside the big white tent.

Asked for his comments, the Mayor of Escuminac, Bruce Wafer, was enthusiastic: "It was a success. The school day was great. We figure around 700 people flowed through the tent during the day on Saturday. The tri-cultural jam with Mlou was amazing. We will be meeting soon for a debriefing and forming a steering committee for the 2nd edition." He indicated that the event "...achieved its purpose: brought the three cultures together and was well covered by the media. The future looks bright!"

Strawberry Rhubarb Crisp

- 4 cups sliced hulled strawberries
- 4 cups diced rhubarb (about 5 stalks), cut into 1/2-inch pieces
- $1 \frac{1}{2}$ cups granulated sugar
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch, in 2 tbsps water (optional)
- cup all-purpose flour 1
- 1 cup old-fashioned oats
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

- 1/2 cup butter, cut into pieces
- cup sliced almonds, toasted 1/2

Coat a slow cooker with nonstick cooking spray. Place strawberries, rhubarb, 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar and lemon juice in the crock and mix well. Cook on high 1 1/2 hours, or until fruit is tender. If fruit is dry after cooking, add a little water. If fruit has too much liquid, mix cornstarch with 2 tablespoons water and stir into liquid. Cook on high an additional 15 minutes, or until cooking liquid is thickened.

Preheat the oven to 375 F. For the topping, combine flour, oats, sugars, ginger, and nutmeg in medium bowl. Cut in butter using a pastry cutter or two knives until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in almonds. Remove the lid from the slow cooker and gently sprinkle topping onto fruit. Transfer the stoneware to the oven. Bake 15 to 20 minutes or until topping begins to brown. Makes 8 servings.

GESGAPEGIAG: - As usual, the gym was packed on Wednesday, June 19, when Wejgwapniag School handed out its annual awards and tributes to students and school supporters. Principal Sheila Gedeon recounted a lengthy list of initiatives at the school to prepare today's children for tomorrow's world. She noted how the school is known for its hugs: "It's all about taking care of each other." Next year Wejgwapniag will be offering its first full-time pre-K experience for the little ones, "...a way to improve school readiness and also Mi'gmaq language skills." The year after, the kindergarten will also be taught exclusively in the native tongue. Wejgwapniag will participate in the Harmony project along with the French and English schools to bring the three cultures together and lower barriers. At the ceremony, the school honoured community members Veronica Jerome, Al Martin and Betty Martin for the roles they have played in helping fundraise for special activities. Among the graduates, Kenyon Larocque was honoured with the Elaine Vicaire Award for the best all-round personality, Dariean Jerome took home the mathematics award and Abbey Gedeon was celebrated as the best all-round student. Congratulations to all the award winners!
